Task 9

1) Create small groups and collectively find answers to the questions:

- What were the main challenges faced by Kurelians and the Latvian resistance during World War II?
- How did external factors, such as support from Western powers, influence Latvia's struggle for independence?
- In what ways do you think Kurelians' actions reflect broader themes of resilience and national identity?

2) Discuss the answers you found together in the class.

3) Discuss whether you know any similar examples of resistance.

Task 10

After previous task about Kurelians, write a short reflection paper (1 - 2 paragraphs) discussing:

- 1) What you found most interesting about Kurelians' life and actions.
- 2) How understanding their story contributes to your knowledge of Latvia's history during World War II.
- 3) Any lessons you think can be applied to contemporary issues regarding national identity and resilience.

Task 11

These challenges illustrate the difficult circumstances under which the Latvian Legion operated during World War II, highlighting their struggle for independence amidst external pressures and internal conflicts.

1) Please familiarize yourself with the aspects of the issue related to the Latvian Legion:

1. Complex Political Landscape:

The Latvian Legion operated in a chaotic political environment characterized by shifting alliances and multiple governing bodies claiming legitimacy over Latvia. This instability complicated their mission and objectives.

2. Pressure from German Authorities:

As the war progressed, the German military became increasingly wary of the motives of the Kurelians (the group associated with the Legion). They imposed demands for control over the Kurelians, leading to tension and conflict between the two groups.

3. Desertion and Internal Discipline Issues:

The Legion faced challenges with desertion, particularly as soldiers from the primarily conscript-based Latvian Legion sought to join Kurelians' group. This influx created internal discipline problems and divergent views on how to achieve their goals.

4. Lack of Clear Strategy:

There was uncertainty about the ultimate goal and strategy for achieving independence. While the desire for independence was clear, the methods to attain it—whether through guerrilla warfare or other means—were not well-defined.

5. Military Engagements and Retreats:

The Kurelians were involved in military engagements against German forces as they retreated. They faced significant risks during these confrontations, which culminated in being surrounded by a large German force in November 1944.

6. Arrests and Executions:

Many leaders and members of the Kurelians were arrested by German authorities, leading to executions and imprisonment in concentration camps. This crackdown severely weakened their ranks and morale.

7. Post-War Repression:

After the war, those associated with the Kurelians faced persecution under Soviet rule, including executions and deportations to Gulags, as they were viewed as threats to Soviet authority.

8. Legacy of Controversy:

The legacy of the Latvian Legion remains controversial, particularly regarding its association with Nazi Germany. This has led to complex discussions within Latvia about national identity and historical memory.

- 2) Split into groups and choose one of them.
- 3) Gather information that could serve as a reason for such a perception of the Latvian legionnaires.
- 4) In your group, create a presentation that reflects your research and present it to the others.

Task 12

- 1) Draw connections between the Nazi occupation of Liepaja (Latvia) and Nazi occupations in Germany, for example:
 - The similarities in occupation strategies, such as ghettoization and anti-Jewish measures.
 - Unique features specific to Liepaja, such as the scale of massacres and local collaboration etc.
- 2) Create a comparative table based on the task requirements, choose comparison criteria, and compare Liepaja (Latvia) and Germany.
- 3) At the end of the table, draw conclusions.
